PRESS RELEASE

April 17, 2018

Rhode Island Commission on the Deaf and Hard of Hearing (RICDHH) is proud to announce the launch of our new website. Please check out the website at www.cdhh.ri.gov and let us know what you think.

The new website provides a clear message of what services and programs RICDHH offers. The website also includes an easy navigable web browser where you can find information more quickly. Due to the improved menu frame and functionality, our navigation directs you to the information most relevant to you. The website also has various user-friendly features available for use, including Google Calendar, Facebook, Twitter, YouTube, News Archives, Media Gallery, American Sign Language (ASL) Vlogs, and online request forms.

You will notice that the website has had a major facelift in appearance and design. Eye-catching colors and pictures were incorporated to increase more usability and encourage frequent visits to the site. Most of the photos included in the website were taken in Rhode Island. That is something RICDHH takes pride in and shows what the state of Rhode Island has to offer.

Additionally, the RICDHH website is easily configurable and fully responsive to mobile devices, such as smartphones, tablets, and laptops. No matter which device you use, you now have access to the RICDHH website on the go.

As our website enters Phase II, RICDHH will continue to enhance your website experience. In Phase II, you will see more video content and expanded information and resources. You will also be able to track updates of RICDHH Legislative bills that are introduced from year to year. Phase II is projected to be completed at the end of this year.

Steven Florio, Executive Director, states, "I am really proud of the new website and feel it will create the experience you're looking for. The hard work of my staff members, who understand the value of resources available through the website, has paid off. I thank them for the creativity and passion they put into this project."
